HELMBOLT ON TRIAL

MANY WITNESSES EXAMINED

The trial of Thomas Helmbolt, charged with the murder of F. H. Whiteside, was commenced at Stettler, on Tuesday. The defence was conducted by Hon. A. G. Mackay, K. C. of Edmonton and E. C. Locke of Coronation. J. W. Heffernan, assisted by Geo. Auxier of Castor, conducted the case for the crown. There was little delay in selecting the jury, who were G. Swinner and J. B. Griffith of Stettler; J. Reid, Castor; T. H. Creighton, Red Willow; Willis Peterson, Hinton, and E. B. Purdy of Monitor. Judge Ives presided at the trial.

A statement made by Whiteside, just before he died, in which he gave his version of the shooting. The trial will be finished this week and it is expected that the jury will not be long in giving their findings.

HALLOWEEN DANCE

A very successful dance was put on by the Band, last Tuesday. The band boys had worked hard and had the hall very well decorated with lanterns, bunting, etc. They intend giving a number of dances during the winter months.

WAR NOTES

The submarine Deutschland has arrived at the States on her second trip across the Atlantic.

The United States has asked Germany for an explanation of the sinking of the liner Marinn, when six Americans were killed. No warning was given to the ship before it was sunk.

The British lost six drift net boats, the transport Queen and two torpedo boat destroyers, in a German destroyer and submarine raid on the cross-channel shipping.

Berlin reports that the U-53 has arrived at a German port.

The Rumanians are on the offensive and have cleared the Vulean Pass.

The total British casualties, on all fronts, for October were 167,033.

Hard fighting is going on with the allies making some good gains.

The allies are continuing the advance in Macedonia altho bad weather is hampering any big operations.

DEATH

The death occurred on Wednesday, the 31st, 1916, of Huldia Conwell, the fifteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Conwell. On Sunday she was stricken with infantile paralysis and was sick only three days. The heartfelt sympathy of their friends are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Conwell in their great loss.

LADY URSULA'S HUSBAND

CHAPTER XIX.

The manner in which Paul Payne received this announcement concerning the detective who was hanging about the grounds of Care Court struck a blow to Lord Eastling. Although he knew a good deal, and suspected much more, about the lawless doings of his brother-in-law in the past, the young man had hoped against hope that Paul was now, as he would have put it, "running straight," and that he was showing at least some respect to the noble woman he had married as to keep away from questionable dealings now that he was connected by marriage with an honorable family.

Lord Eastling, favorably impressed from the outset by the manners and good temper of Paul Payne, had always been generous in his views of him, and had wished, as much for the man's sake as for Lady Ursula's, that he would live down his past bad record and prove himself at least apparently worthy of the family into which he had married, as an offset against his reputation by the family into which he was born.

But the events of the past few days had shattered that hope, and Paul's sudden change of color on hearing about the detective in the grounds had made it impossible to doubt that he was still acting in concert with thieves.

Of course, Paul recovered his self-possession immediately, and affected to be much amused by the solemn warning thus given.

"That's awfully interesting by Jove!" said he as he opened the door. "Facts always are exciting to hear about, aren't they, when they belong to other people?"

With these words he left his brother-in-law, and let himself into the room where Brady Gane was waiting.

A Caustic Beggar

Old Lady: "Here's a penny, my poor man. Tell me, how did you become so destitute?"

Beggar: "I was always like you, mum, a-givin' away vast sums fer the pore an' needy."—London Opinion.

Brady, who was fidgeting about impatiently, fidgeting everything in the room, apparently with the object of discovering something which it would be worth while to carry off, dropped the volume bound in red morocco, which he had been turning over, and drew himself up. "Well, where's the stuff?" asked he quickly.

Paul shook his head. It was plain from his looks that he had received a shock, and the other stared at him apprehensively.

"Nothing gone wrong, eh?" said he in a hoarse whisper. "If it has, Syd, it begins to look as if you'd lost your nerve, or something. I'm sick and tired of the way you've kept us hanging round. Come, out with it. What's amiss?"

Paul made an effort to recover his usual calm manner, which impressed his nervous and fidgety confederates so much. But the knowledge that danger had come so very close unnerved him, and his eyes wandered uneasily towards the window as he spoke.

"There's a Yard man in the grounds, on the lookout," said he. "You've been followed, Gane. You must get away as fast as you can, and be sure you don't go straight back to Evans. When you do, see him, warn him to be careful."

But before he had come to the end of this speech the expression of the other man had altered somewhat. From interested he had become incredulous and impatient.

"Oh, yes, I dare say!" said he in a mocking tone. "We've had that game played on us already. Won't work the second time, my lord. Not 'at'."

"What do you mean?" asked Paul, who, however, knew very well.

"Oh, what I mean, your lordship, is as you told me that when I came to see you at the hotel. You said as how there was a fellow on the lookout, and as you couldn't give me the stuff because he was ready for you to pounce on me. You said as I should find his hand on my shoulder before I'd got out of the house, and as he'd call a copper, and give me in charge. You mustn't be found with the stuff on you," says you. And I, like the silly kid I was, let myself be kidded, and went away without the stuff. Lord, how you must have laughed!"

Paul, seeing that he had a hard task before him in persuading Gane to go away quietly without the stones, sat down in an armchair, crossed his legs and took out a cigar.

Brady's eyes grew round with indignation.

"Look here," said he, "I'll stand no nonsense. Go and fetch the stuff, and share out. No more larks!"

"I'm not in the humor for larks, I assure you. Neither am I in the humor to be arrested on a charge of being concerned in stealing valuable jewellery. And as that is what would inevitably happen if you were to go out of the house with ten thousand pounds' worth of stones on you, I'm obliged to deny your request, unreasonable as it is no doubt seems to you."

Gane moved impatiently.

"Stow that bunkum!" growled he. "I wasn't arrested at the hotel when I was fool enough to listen to you, and to let myself be gulled into going away without the pearls you promised us. Well, I was had once, but I'm not having none this time."

"I can't help that, I see the point of your remarks, but the fact that you escaped search once does not induce me to think you would escape a second time. Anyhow, I can't afford to run risks."

"Why not? I can."

Paul laughed not in a conciliatory tone.

"It's not quite the same thing. What are your risks compared to mine?"

"Oh, come now—"

Paul drew himself up and spoke with more emphasis.

"I repeat: what are your risks? What is a term of imprisonment to you? You've done one or two already, and you're as well off in goal as you are out of it. With me it's different. Even you will admit that, I suppose."

"Even me? I like your cheek, Syd."

"Of course you do. It's my cheek, as you call it, that has enabled me to help you in ways that I'm sorry for and ashamed of."

Gane stuck out his chin.

"Oh, so that's it, is it? You're coming the virtuous dodge over us, eh, to get out of giving back our share? What are you going to do with them, eh? Give 'em back again, perhaps? Like what they say you did with the pearls? Is that the new game? Chuckle-headed sort of sport, I call it, and what's more, I don't believe as you mean to do it. So there now."

Paul shook his head.

"If I were ever so virtuous I couldn't give back the things now, because they don't exist any longer. I've taken the stones out and thrown away the settings—"

"Yes! pretty well that, for a man as is turned so good!"

Paul nodded.

"As you say, it's pretty well for a man turned good. But I'm not good. Don't be afraid. I'm only frightened."

"Frightened?"

The confession was so unexpected that Gane stared.

But Paul nodded again gravely and slowly.

"Yes, it's funk, pure funk, blue funk, that makes me anxious that neither you, nor I, nor Evans should be caught now. A little while ago I think I could have carried it off without so much as minding the penalty. But I couldn't now; I own it."

His face grew very grave, and he looked out at the trees and the lawn and the misty landscape beyond, instead of at Gane, as he went on: "I want to turn over a new leaf."

Gane laughed hoarsely, incredulously still.

"Well, turn away as fast as ever you like. We shan't stop you," he cried mockingly. "Only, before you turn, just you hand us over what belongs to us."

"All right. But not now. Listen, Gane. I want to know whether you and Evans will consent to some sort of a new arrangement. You wouldn't get much on the stones, under the circumstances."

But Gane's face had flushed, and his eyes were protruding.

"No, you don't," cried he with excitement, as he clenched his fist and ground his teeth, and came nearer to Paul in a threatening attitude. "You don't play that game on us. We're not a-going to let you take a few sovereigns and leave you to go off with the swag that we've been waiting for our share of this many weeks. We're—"

Paul rose from his chair, and his face assumed that hard look which Gane was more accustomed to in him than to the more amiable expression which he had worn so far that morning.

"All right," he said quietly. "Blush—"

"I should think not!" jeered Gane at a white heat.

"I'm not a saint."

"Not quite."

"I'm rather the other thing."

"Just about."

"But I can't afford to be found out."

"And suppose I was to go right up to this 'tee—' if I could find him, 'jeer' Gane, 'and to tell him as there was a fine gentleman in this house with a good haul of jewels as wasn't his own to be accounted for, what then?"

"Then you would probably get locked up as a person suffering from delusions," observed Paul imperturbably.

Bulletin on Farm Accounts

Valuable Information Contained in a New Bulletin by Prof. G. G. White

"Farm Cost Accounting," is the title of a new bulletin by Prof. G. G. White, of Manitoba Agricultural College. In writing this bulletin, Prof. White treats the question of farm accounts from rather a new angle. He holds that the type of bookkeeping required on a farm differs entirely from ordinary bookkeeping.

"The primary object of farm cost accounting," says Prof. White, "is to determine what the farm business as a whole is making or losing each year, what each department is making or losing, and to give such information regarding each as will enable the owner to manage his farm more intelligently by knowing what it is costing him to produce."

After dealing in detail with the whole problem of farm cost accounts, Prof. White includes a number of tables and instructions, such as how to estimate the number of bushels of grain in a bin, amount of hay in a stack, quantity of silage in a silo, data regarding average life of implements, and similar information of general farm interest. A copy of the bulletin may be had free from the Manitoba Department of Agriculture, Winnipeg.

THE PEACE RIVER COUNTRY

This Fertile Area of Canada's Hinterland
Described in a New Booklet

The demand for accurate and reliable information with regard to the Peace River country is widespread, and is rapidly becoming more insistent. Any effort, therefore, that may be made to provide this information through official sources is both timely and valuable.

A booklet entitled "The Peace River Country" just issued by the Department of the Interior dealing with this matter deserves to be brought prominently to public attention.

Hitherto those who wished to obtain information with reference to this new land have been dependent on reports of a more or less fragmentary nature, gathered from any source that happened to be available. In compiling authentic information from reliable sources and publishing it in the form of a handy and attractive booklet of fifty pages, the Department has provided a much needed source of information for all who are or who may become interested in the Peace River country.

While a few pioneer settlers have from time to time penetrated this portion of Northern Canada, it has only been within the past few years that it has been possible to regard the great Peace River valley as within the reach of the homeseeker. The almost insurmountable difficulty in taking in supplies and machinery and the corresponding task of marketing the crop rendered this fertile area of Canada's hinterland a veritable "terra incognita."

Although but few have explored this district, many will be surprised to learn that so long ago as 1876 grain from the Peace River captured the trophy in competition with the world at the Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

The booklet deals with all the subjects which naturally suggest themselves to the average inquirer. Under the headings of Agriculture, Timber, Minerals, Game and Transportation the pamphlet gives a mass of information. Climate and rainfall are also dealt with. Numerous extracts are given from the reports of well-known explorers and scientists who have visited the country, dating from the beginning of last century down to the present day. There is a consensus of opinion among these authorities as to the adaptability of the country to the growth of all grains and root crops. The great amount of sunshine which obtains in these northern latitudes renders vegetation both rapid and luxuriant.

In the Peace River district the seasons change very quickly, so that as soon as the snow passes the ground is ready for seeding. The soil in some places consists of a rich black loam. In others it varies from a blue clay with a top soil of sandy loam—from two to six inches—to a sandy loam much desired by wheat growers.

Vegetables attain a large size. During a large part of the winter season cattle and horses may remain out-doors.

It is a country adapted both to mixed farming and ranching. A copy of the booklet may be obtained by addressing the Railway Lands Branch, Department of the Interior, Ottawa.

Note and Comment

According to the New York Journal of Commerce, the gross tonnage of merchant vessels of all nations destroyed since the beginning of the war up to Oct. 1st is over 3,000,000 tons. The total number of ships lost was 1,662, embracing eleven nations with Japan and the United States escaping most lightly; the former from its isolated position, and the latter because it has no deepwater commercial marine worth calculating.

Nearly all the dogs in Germany are said to be at work.

So they are here; but their activities are generally confined to hunting bones, scrapping and howling at night.

Law is a fashion that changes with human conditions.

What it was ten years ago it is not now. It grows with the world. It is part of the evolution of mankind, and every man should understand it so, especially if he is a lawmaker.

Law is simply human desire put into form, and hence is not constant; and the precedent of yesterday is error today.

A certain judge in the province has a remarkable head of hair of which he is rather proud.

Not long ago a man was up before him, and in the course of the trial an amusing incident occurred. The prisoner was exceedingly impudent, interrupting the witnesses and insulting all who had anything to say for or against him. Considering the case proved, the judge turned to the prisoner and asked: "Have you any remarks to make?" "Yes I have," he replied flippantly, "your hair wants cutting!" There was an audible titter in court, which developed into a roar of laughter as the judge coolly replied: "So does yours, my friend, and I'll give you three months to do it in."

From reports that have been received at this office it appears that a new brand of 'hog-wash' is on the market. What kind of a guarantee goes with each bottle is not known, as those who were lucky enough to procure some of it are keeping it quiet. We understand that the 'hog-wash' has been selling for $3.00 a bottle, but whether the bottles are round, flat or square is not at present known.

Ten thousand dollars' worth of new popular music was burned up in a recent New York fire. It isn't such a bad world, after all.

Mr. Knibbs, the Australian Commonwealth statistician, has issued a return which shows that the cost of living, in that country, had increased 34 per cent, since the beginning of the war.

Two soldiers caused some amusement at a Scotch golf course the other day. The first missed up and made a mighty sweep, but failed to lift the ball. The miss was repeated no fewer than three times.

His pal was unable to stand it any longer, and said in an angry voice, "For gaid's sake, Jock, hit the blomin' thing—ye ken we hae only four days' leave."

A city man, familiar with life in the country, uses the "woodshed test" to determine whether it is safe to lend a farmer money. If he finds a good stock of wood on hand, with plenty of it split and neatly piled and come out fine for kindling, he concludes that the man is for-landed, looks after his wife's comfort, does not spend his rainy days at the store, and is a good risk. If the woodshed shows shiftlessness he refuses to lend.

In fishing for the German vote Hughes is not unlikely to fall into the water and lose all.

His heart bleeds for them, the kaiser assures his people. This sympathy must be of great support to the Germans reeling in the red dance of death. But is there another family of six sons except the Hohenzollern family in all Germany which has not lost one of them in battle since the war started?

Have you paid your past due subscription yet?

Statistics show

That for the first six months of 1916 there was a big increase in fire losses in Canada.

Your home or place of business may be included in the losses of the next six months.

Better have them insured at once and not run the risk of being left penniless in case of a fire.

THE CONGESTION FROM A BAD COLD LOOSEMED UP IN ONE HOUR

If Rubbed on at Night
You're Well Next Morning
Nerviline Never Fails

When that cold comes, how is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat vigorously with "Nerviline." Rub it in good and deep. Lots of rubbing can't do any harm. Then put some Nerviline in the water and use it as a gargle; this will ease the cough, cut out the phlegm, assist in breaking up the cold quickly.

There is no telling how quickly Nerviline breaks up a hard racking cough, eases a tight chest, relieves a pleuritic pain. Why, there isn't another liniment with half the power, the penetrative qualities, the honest merit that has made Nerviline the most popular American "household liniment."

A large 50c bottle of Nerviline cures ills of the whole family, and makes doctor's bill small. Get it today. The large size is more economical than the 25c trial size. Sold by dealers everywhere, or direct from the Catarthozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

The Study of Russian

German as a language will not be popular in Canada after the war. Neither for the matter of that will it be popular anywhere else in the British Empire. Which is not to be wondered at. No doubt a certain number of people, attracted by German literature and anxious to study at first hand the amazing phenomenon of the Hun mind as disclosed during the last two years, will learn German in future. But most people will leave it severely alone. What will take its place? Unquestionably French will be studied more than ever. But there is one language besides French which Canadian students would do well to acquire. That is Russian. After the war Canada's trade with Russia should grow rapidly. The channels through which it will flow are now being made by the shipment of war supplies. In the future these channels will be deepened. And the need for a closer understanding between Canada and Russia will then be imperative.—Vancouver World.

Germans Invited to Eat Bones

German science has exercised its ingenuity in every direction in the search for substitutes for fat. Among the most valuable results are those connected with the food value of bones. It has been discovered that roasted and dried bones yield, to begin with, 10 per cent. of fat of excellent quality and very useful for domestic cookery. Besides this, capital gravy is thus produced. After this the bones can be dried and boiled again and ground to powder. This contains 24.1 per cent. of protein and 13.11 per cent. of fat. Experiments made by the Foodstuff Department of the East Prussian Chamber of Agriculture show that pigs, poultry and horses thrive on this diet.

Think Twice Before Selling

Fable of the Man Who Did Not Want to Sell His Farm

A farmer who had decided to sell his property listed it with a real estate dealer who wrote a very good description of the place. When the agent read over to the farmer for his approval, the old man said, "Read that again." After the second reading the farmer sat for several moments in a thoughtful mood, finally said, "I don't believe I want to sell. I've been looking for just such a place all my life and it never occurred to me that I had it until you described it to me. No, I don't want to sell out."

"As story contains a lesson for farmers, whether the story is in fact or an actual occurrence. Many do not appreciate their own farms until someone points out the desirable features in a way to give the reader a very exaggerated idea of the farm, while every statement about it may be strictly accurate.

Corns are caused by the pressure of tight boots, but no one need be troubled with them long when so simple a remedy as Holloway's Corn Cure is available.

Canada's Semi-Centennial.

Next Dominion Day in Canada will mark the 50th anniversary of the founding of the nation. Its people are indulging in no flattering or false illusions at present; rather are they preparing to respond to further calls upon their loyalty, no matter what sacrifices may be involved; but they would be more or less than human if they did not cherish the hope that next Dominion Day may be observed in the assurance of an established and enduring peace throughout the Empire, and throughout the world.—Christian Science Monitor.

Spent Countless Nights Unable to Rest or Sleep

Was Run Down and in Terribly Nervous Condition—By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Gained Regularly

In this letter is told once more the story which comes from many thousands of women. It is the story of exhausted nerves of a run-down system and of all the accompanying misery of sleeplessness, headaches and loss of energy and vigor.

But there is silver lining to this cloud. There is the light of new hope and courage which comes with the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This letter is so representative of the kind we are daily receiving that you can judge from it what you might expect from this treatment under similar circumstances.

Mrs. Conrad Schmidt, R. R. No. 1, Milverton, Ont., writes: "Two years ago last spring I was run down, had nervous prostration, and was in a terribly nervous condition. I could not sleep or eat. Could scarcely count the nights that I passed without sleep, and if I did eat, had sick headaches and vomiting spells. My limbs would swell so badly that I could not walk. I would jump up in bed, awakened by bad dreams; in fact, I was so bad I thought I could not live, and started to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food without much hope.

"It was not long before I began to improve under this treatment, and I can truthfully say it has done me a world of good. It took some time to get the nervous system restored, but I kept right on using the Nerve Food regularly, and gradually gained in health and strength. I have a fine baby boy now. He weighed 12 lbs. at birth, and though my friends were anxious after the condition I was in, I got over that fine, and now weigh 120 lbs. Before using the Nerve Food I was a mere skeleton."

You are not asked to expect miracles from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. But if you are willing to feed back your exhausted nerves to health and strength you can depend absolutely on this great food cure to produce the desired results. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50. The Market Report

Supplied by Randall, Gee & Mitchell, Limited, Winnipeg

A very positive feature of the world's wheat situation under the conditions now existing is that the markets are more sensitive to bullish than to bearish news. The underlying condition of bullishness and while this will not prevent wide price fluctuations, the chances are more favorable to the maintenance of a high level than to any permanent decline.

So far as present indications are a criterion, the beginning of the third year in the European struggle finds the situation the strongest it has been since that eventful August of 1914. In two out of three seasons of the war the harvests have been disappointing. In 1914 the world's wheat supply was almost wholly dependent on this continent, and while 1915 was the most favorable year in the surplus producing countries, the present season is one of disappointment.

The wheat market since the first of last July has been a most remarkable one. There have been great bull periods before, but it is very doubtful if these great price movements have been based on such substantial grounds. The trade has never seen heretofore a market which recorded so great an advance ostensibly on sheer speculation, and when that speculation went "stale" failed to turn sharply in the other direction and record a decline almost equal to the advance, if indeed it did not show a loss greater than the upturn.

It is the firm undertone of the market at the higher level that is most impressive. It is confirmatory of the strong commercial position of wheat independent of speculation. Few will dispute that previous to last year there was a decided shift in speculative sentiment to the short side of the market when prices had shown such marked hesitancy to go higher. Based on the history of previous bull markets, this growing bearishness had excellent precedence, but these abnormal times and the market proved to be stronger than the speculative element realize.

A countryman, while walking along a street, saw a sign: "Please ring the bell for the caretaker." After reflecting for a few minutes he walked up and pulled the bell. After waiting a while, an angry-faced man appeared. "Are you the caretaker?" asked the bell-puller. "Yes, what do you want?" "I saw the notice, so I rang the bell, and now I want to know why you can't ring it yourself."

Overcrowding the Roads

As the number of motor cars multiplies, the more evident it is that constant care by motorists is required. The highways are not being widened proportionately. There is a continually greater demand upon the available road space. Suppose a million or a million and a half new cars come on the market next season. Many of these will be operated by inexperienced drivers. There will be many accidents, of course. One great trouble is that even an experienced and careful driver is not safe, because an irresponsible person may at any moment run into him.—Editorial in Providence Journal.

New Competitors in Bacon
Argentina has, in the past nine years, been the best customer of the British Berkshire Society. Russia has also been a fairly free purchaser. The number of competitors in the world's bacon market is increasing and quality will be more than ever the price of pre-eminence when the war is over.

Faustian in Preparation.—Unlike any other stomach regulator, Parmenter's Vegetable Pills are the result of long study of Vegetable compounds calculated to stimulate the stomachic functions and maintain them at the normal condition. And this reputation they have maintained for years and will continue to maintain, for these pills must always stand at the head of the list of standard preparations.

A British Julius Caesar
Julius Caesar had a prominent nose in Sir Julius Caesar, Master of the Rolls during the reign of James I, who married a niece of Bacon, and perhaps knew the key to the notorious "cryptic." About him Lord Clarendon tells an amusing story. The unpopular Earl of Fostland sat up all night in a barricaded room, waiting for the morning to be armed to the teeth, because he had found in his pocket, a slip of paper on which was written "Remember Caesar." Next day he found that this referred, not to the assassination of the Roman statesman, but to some prearranged promise to a son of Sir Julius Caesar. The tomb of Sir Julius Caesar, with a quaint epitaph in legal phraseology, is among the many curious monuments of St. Helen's, Bishopsgate.

Little Johnny, who had been studying history but a short time, thought he would give his grandfather a try-out on the subject, and asked: "Say, Grandpa, what great war broke out in 1850?" The old gentleman laid down his paper and looked thoughtfully at the boy for a moment, and then a sudden light dawned upon him. "Why," he said, "that was the year I married your grandmother."—Harper's Magazine.

Winter Feeding of Cattle

Low Grade Grain That Can Be Used to Advantage in Feeding

At the present time there are daily passing through the Winnipeg stock yards scores of carloads of stocker and feeder cattle which are on their way from the farms of Manitoba and Saskatchewan to the farms of the Central and Central Western States. During the month of August, 4,895 head of cattle of all classes crossed the line from the Winnipeg yards, and this was before the stocker and feeder movement had got under full steam. At the same time, there is in many parts of our own country a good deal of feed that will never be used, some of it grain that is scarcely worth threshing, but that could be used to feed a large number of animals.

This combination of circumstances makes especially timely a new circular on Winter Feeding of Cattle by the Animal Husbandry Department of Manitoba Agricultural College. This circular contains data as to actual results in previous Manitoba feeding experiments, and offers suggestions to those who are open to consider this line of enterprise. A free copy may be had by writing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Winnipeg, or Manitoba Agricultural College.

New Banking Device

Multiple Cheque Is Great Saver of Depositor's Time

The multiple cheque is the latest banking device to save depositors trouble. It has been brought out by a Boston trust company, and its chief use is to make it possible for a depositor to pay all his monthly bills by drawing one cheque on or about the first of the month.

The new cheque is precisely like the old style cheque, except that its size is much increased to give room at the bottom for writing a list of firms with the sum set opposite each one of the drawer's desires to pay. These are added up, and the cheque for the total, payable to the bank, is duly filled out and signed. That ends the bother of the depositor, for the bank does the rest. It deposits the sums named to the credit of such payees as happen to be depositors and remits to the others.

The payer may make entry of the firms and amounts paid on the stub of the cheque, or he may enter only the total, saving his statements of account for record.

The plan means more work for the bank and less for the depositor. But the bank gets its reward, no doubt, in the satisfaction of the patron and the consequent attraction of other patrons.

The bank cheque is a wonderful instrument of business. We have become so accustomed to it that we sometimes fail to appreciate its daily miracle. The invention of the multiple cheque shows that the uses to which cheques may be put have by no means been exhausted.

MOTHER LOVE AIDS SON IN TRENCHES

It Brings Relief to Boy Standing His Watch Deep In Mud.

Once upon a time, only a few months after the terrible world war had begun, Private Bailey, a soldier in the ranks, had stood for days in the trenches "somewhere in France." The cold rains soaked him to the skin; the mud was deep. He had had no rest. Weary and aching with rheumatic pain, he recalled the faith his mother had in Sloan's Liniment. He asked for it in his next letter home. A large bottle was immediately sent him and a few applications killed the pain, once more he was able to stand the severe exposure. He shared this wonderful muscle-soother with his comrades, and they all agreed it was the greatest "reinforcement" that had ever come to their rescue. At your druggist, 25c, 50c and $1.00 a bottle.

Sloan's Liniment KILLS PAIN

Western Druggists—Notice

The first cold snap starts rheumatic pains and aches. You feel it in the knees climbing steps or in the back or shoulders. Joints are stiff, muscles are sore, every exertion is a painful reminder. You resign yourself to a session of torture.

But there is relief at hand, Sloan's Liniment, easily applied without rubbing, it quickly penetrates and drives the crippling pain and disabling ache out of your system. Bending and lifting are no longer agony.

Bruises, bumps and sprains following exercise quickly yield to its application and mothers have it handy for the numerous minor injuries to children that are more painful than dangerous. Sloan's Liniment quickly soothes rheumatism, gout, neuralgia and kindred ills that put grown-ups in misery, chronic cold feet, toothache; in fact, all external pains are banished by Sloan's Liniment, and it does not stain the skin or clog the pores, a disagreeable feature of plasters and ointments.

Britain's Amazing Inventions

The British are manufacturing new war invention, "which would turn the Krupp's green with envy," according to Dr. Benjamin Rand, of Harvard University, who returned from New York recently from a visit to England.

Accorded privileges of inspection by the British Foreign Office, Dr. Rand said he visited munition and ordnance factories and saw "some astounding inventions," but that he was pledged not to disclose their nature. He found among every class, he said, an intense determination to do all possible to win the war. In one factory he saw 7,000 women at work, uniformly in khaki.

New factories were being built, he said, and existing ones constantly extended.

Cannon and the Clouds

Improbable That Cannonading Has an Appreciable Effect on Rainfall

By a remarkable coincidence the latter half of the year 1914, and the whole of 1915 and 1916, so far as it has gone, have shown an excessive rainfall in many parts of America and Europe, a state of affairs that has given rise to many surmises concerning the relations between the discharge of great quantities of ammunition from the front in Europe and the heavy fall of moisture. In an address delivered recently before the British Rainfall Association a member of that body pointed out that the processes of nature are so vast that it is highly improbable that even the great gunfire of recent months has had any effect on precipitation. To illustrate this statement it was shown that in one month the excess of rainfall over an area of 58,000 square miles, which includes England and Wales, was 3 1-2 inches. The speaker showed that this large excess represents over thirty billion tons of water, which must have been carried over England and Wales to transport that water in the form of vapor must have been at least 100 times that amount in weight. Such staggering figures are regarded as evidence that the amount of force required to move masses of this magnitude is far beyond that which can be exerted even by modern nations at war.

LETTER FROM FRONT

Extract from letter from J. A. Connah, written October 1st.

I came out of the trenches 3 days ago. My gun (5 of us) took a share in the last big advance and made for where we knew the enemy's gun was on the other side of "No man's land."

I can not describe the fighting on paper as it would be horrible reading, enough to say one does not want to go into it every day. You may take my word for it however, that when the time comes for us to "hop the parapet" the Canadians skip across like mad. Our section was lucky and all got across (4 gun crews) with only two wounded. We took 16 men and an officer prisoners in their dugout, and also captured his gun. As No. 1, I got the officer's 2 revolvers, (I gave one to No. 2 on the gun) two helmets and a pair of fine field glasses. A staff officer offered me $10.00 for a helmet but I am keeping that and the revolver. Since I have been given my stripes as Lance Corporal, whether the capture had anything to do with it or not I don't know.

PLANS FOR PLACING IMMIGRANTS ON THE LAND AFTER THE WAR

BETTER MANAGEMENT OF IMMIGRATION PROBLEM

Lord Shaughnessy Says That There Must Be a Selection of the Desired Classes and a Refusal to Accept Any and Every Settler Who Might Offer to Come to Canada

Lord Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, after returning from a prolonged tour of inspection of the company's system in the West, gave a most cheering report on conditions in the four Western Provinces.

Being asked about immigration after the war, His Lordship made several important statements. In the first place, he said that even if there was a movement toward Canada immediately after the war, it could not be handled, since it would take considerable time to get the troops back, and there would be a great deal of preliminary adjustment in Europe. In the second place, he said that after the war there ought to be a much more thorough administration of the immigration problem.

He said that in addition to dealing in a better way with the immigrant after he reached Canada, there should be perfect supervision at the point of origin. There must be a selection of the desired classes, and refusal to accept any and every settler who might offer to come to Canada.

In the third place, His Lordship said that after the war every means would be used to present the advantages of Canada to the interested settlers and to all desirable colonists who might wish to make new homes in new countries.

The Canadian Pacific would continue to make every effort to aid these settlers after they reached the Dominion. He expected that the policy of the ready-made farm would be continued, but he thought that instead of building houses, immigrants might be furnished with materials for buildings at the lowest possible prices and be allowed to construct their own buildings, thus reducing the cost and affording the newcomers employment for the first months of their residence in the Dominion.

"We have no manner of doubt with reference to the future of Canada after the war," said His Lordship. "In the course of a few years there will be a satisfactory immigration from Europe, and the development of the country will continue to go forward as rapidly as is desirable. Canada has fully demonstrated its productive capacity, and in the course of a few years, if we do our duty, it will be the equal of any country in the world. With reference to the Western Provinces, I would say that I have never wavered in my faith in them."

Clothing Prices to Ascend Now
Shortage of 200,000,000 pounds of wool confronts the clothiers of America, and unless sheep raisers in that continent get busy at once, winters are going to be colder for millions of persons who cannot meet higher prices, dealers declared in New York. The increasing difficulty of getting wool from abroad, and the amazing shortage of the product in this country is expected to cause a rise in the prices of woollen goods which will be unparalleled.

War and Women's Work

New Place of Women Brought About by War Conditions

The new place of women in the world is considered in an interesting article in the London Times. The dominant idea is that women have become the comrades of men. That implies equality—not uniformity. There is danger of the loss of certain little graceful courtesies—such as the raising of the hat or the man opening the door for the woman. If we keep steadily in view the idea of equality and justice we may be confident that what is good will survive, and what is superfluous will disappear.

After all, there was a good deal of humbug and hypocrisy in the old system. The man's hat was raised punctiliously, but somewhere some drunken husband was beating his wife, so the lady was living on his wife's hard work and savings. The woman was so sanctified that she must be protected from the arduous and dangerous labor of making a cross on a ballot; but she could scrub a floor. In this delicate feminine task of floor-washing she went down on her knees, thereby offering a curious resemblance to the old-fashioned gallant lover proposing marriage. It may have happened that the lover went down on his knees before marriage and the wife afterwards.

The occasion of the Times' articles, of course, is the part taken by women in the present war. Women have been seen running omnibuses, and working in munition factories. Truly an amazing spectacle, calculated to win men over to woman's suffrage. The danger, and the toil, add the drudgery and the anxiety connected with bringing up a family counted for nothing. But during the war it has been discovered that women are capable of doing hard work. So possibly they may win the suffrage. The woman omnibus conductor has done a few months what the poor toiler at the needle and the washtub could not do in centuries. —Toronto Star.

Kitchener's Sound Vision

Kitchener had to make one of the hardest choices in history. Nine soldiers in ten would have played for momentary results. They would have hurried into France every fully trained man. They would have packed off half-trained territorials after a month's hardening in camp. They would have left the future to take care of itself. Lord Kitchener, in rejecting the lure of prompt victory, showed the sounder estimate of the enemy's resources and capacity. His decision, a simple, intuitive, was the hardest and most momentous act of will which any general in Europe has ever made. The Kaiser's declared war. There was bigness and vision in that man, and the world must move against its wish to the slow rhythm of his thought. —The New Republic.

Life of Great Guns

The Life of Modern Artillery Pieces Is Comparatively Short

The life of a gun depends upon the progress of erosion, which sooner or later is certain to impair the accuracy of fire, according to Iron Age. Erosion is caused by the action of the explosive gases at high temperature and pressure. The hot gases cause a thin film of steel to absorb heat. The film expands and becomes brittle. Upon the release of the pressure it contracts, which causes minute cracks that grow larger with every discharge. As they increase in size they form passageways for more hot gas, and that tends to enlarge them still further. The inner surface thus becomes roughened and the bore begins to corrode. Finally, the bore becomes so enlarged that it allows the gases to escape. The shell does not then acquire its proper rotation, and its flight becomes erratic.

All guns except small ones are now constructed with linings in the tube, which, when the bore is worn out, is removed and replaced by new ones. The cost of relining a gun is approximately thirty per cent. of the cost of the gun. There are approximately 10,000 guns in the world, and a gun can be relined. The small arms are considered to be worn out after 5,000 to 7,500 rounds have been fired. Small naval guns can be fired about 1,000 times before they are regarded as worn out. Large howitzers and guns, such as the 24-inch, are considered to have a life, on one lining, of from 150 to 200 rounds. Low velocity guns, such as howitzers and mortars, have correspondingly longer lives than high velocity guns of the same calibre, because the pressure they develop, and hence the temperatures, are lower.

Africa a Virgin Land

Development of North African Empire Expected After the War

When the war in Europe shall have ended, the first great question which peace will bring is that of a food supply for the nations impoverished by battles. There will be an immediate necessity for virgin lands from which huge crops may be taken at small cost, and with it will come the need for new sources of food. Every sort, says the "World Outlook."

There can be no doubt but that Europe knows where they are to be found. Unquestionably one of the causes of the present war was the need for richer fields for development. France and England, particularly France, had found them. France had looked across the Mediterranean and had found at the very doorway of Europe the making of a great North African Empire. England had looked and found Egypt. Italy had looked and regained Tripoli for the Roman state.

Peace eventually would have resulted in the development of North Africa, but this war will equal a century of peace in that respect. Battered Europe, turning its empty pockets inside out, will cross the Mediterranean and the North African empire will cease to be a dream and will become a reality.

The Voting Age

In Many European Countries the Voter Has More Restrictions Than Here

Anywhere where North America one must have lived 21 years before he can vote. Not so in many other countries.

The Hun votes at 20, but the Austrian in the other half of the empire must be 24. Prussians cannot vote until they are 25 years old, and that is the minimum age limit in a number of German states.

Twenty-five is also the age in Holland, Belgium and Japan. Denmark is a believer in the wisdom that comes with age, hence no one there under 30 can vote. English-speaking races vote at 21.

In many countries soldiers are disfranchised, and under the Portuguese law no domestic servant or government employee had a ballot.

Sam Selter never lived in Belgium, and yet that country has a peculiar system of multiple voting. College graduates, for example, have three votes, and so do many others who fulfill property requirements.

About 300,000 Belgians have each three votes and more than that number have two votes. Failure to vote in Belgium is punishable as a misdemeanor. —Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Anxious to Settle in Canada

Lance-Sergeant Colin Alexander, of the Royal Highlanders, an interned prisoner of war at the Chateau Dox, Switzerland, has written to London saying how anxiously he and other Canadian Canadians there are awaiting news of what Canada means to do to help them to re-establish themselves in Canada after the war. Alexander, whose thigh was fractured, but who is able to do light work, has ambitions which many others in Switzerland share to settle down as a young farmer on a little Canadian place of his own.

Lawyer: Don't worry. I'll see that you get justice.
Client: I am hiring you for justice; I'm hiring you to win the suit.

OUR OBLIGATION TO OUR ALLIES AND THE SACRIFICES OF WAR

VIEW OF WHAT THE ALLIES HAVE GIVEN AND DONE

No Chapter in the History of National Friendships Has Held Greater Stories Than That Which Records the Reckless Sacrifices of Our Allies During the Early Period of the War

"I think that we shall never be the same people again," said Mr. Hughes, answering the first note of his welcome home. Australians may think with him, and hope with him, that we shall not. We laughed in the sun and followed our prosperous paths with cheerful and childlike arrogance. The first of our men ran bravely, even gayly, to the great game of war, hearing the trumpet and not the groans, seeing the waving banners and not the stricken fields. The knowledge and the pain of long endurance, sorrow and suffering have come to us since then. Surely no man in this country, aloof from war yet redly streaked by war's long fingers, can look back over two years without a sudden flood of almost ashamed gratitude for what other countries have done for it.

When the news of war broke upon us two years ago, there were few indeed who looked forward to this time as only the glimmering dawn of the day of release. Britain was to be the avenger. Her might, though long unused, would spring at once to full life and crush the despisers of her day of release. Britain was to be the avenger. Those first black weeks left us gasping and sweating as from a nightmare. Confidence seemed on point of giving way to terrible foreboding. Then the fulfilment of Joffre's bravely patient plans brought a flush of hope, and after that we settled down to his grim nibbling.

In the long and undeciding months which followed we comprehended more and more distinctly how we were dependent upon strength outside our own. No chapter in the history of national friendships has held greater stories than that which records the reckless sacrifices of Russia for her allies' sake. She thrust an army lance-like into Prussia—it was too slenderly supported to be called a wedge—with the one purpose of lessening the terrible hammering on our weak lines in the west. The costly retreat of that army, involving the withdrawal of a line stretching north and south half across Europe never shook for a moment Russia's sacrificial loyalty. Belgium and Serbia have been destroyed, France has been bled fearfully, great wounds have been torn in the vast territory of Russia and Italy has flung millions in men and money into the whirlpool of war. Each of these nations has been drawn by necessity or policy into the struggle. While that fact is plain enough, we will not attempt meanly to disguise from ourselves the circumstance that their warring has achieved our preservation. Not Britain, nor any of the great nations now linked with her, could have withstood singly the fell preparations of the Germans.

Now, in our own countries, a great measure of strength and order has been wrought out of military nothingness. Though Kitchener has gone, his work remains. We believe that we see victory ahead of us, but we see, too, the pitiful price that has yet to be paid. Slowly we have dragged ourselves, through many little disorders, to unity. It is our turn and our chance to repay our great and gallant friends. To this end Britain herself has given all. Her dominions have given much. To say that Australia could yet give more is not to decry the nobleness and unselfishness of hundreds of thousands of brave men. Individual sacrifices have been innumerable and wonderful. Britain, in calling upon every fit man to serve his turn, has made, as a nation, the supreme sacrifice, and paid her honest debt to the men who first stood to arms. And we—alas, we are laggards!—Sydney Sun.

"I am going to see your father about you," said a teacher to a boy who had exhausted her patience.

"If you do you'll never come back." "Why?" demanded the teacher. "Cause pa's dead."

A Woman's Problem

How to Feel Well During Middle Life Told by Three Women Who Learned from Experience.

The Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, and neglect of health at this time invites disease and pain. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to medicine that will so successfully carry women through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs. Read these letters:—

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I started the Change of Life five years ago. I always had a headache and backache with bearing down pains and I would have nervous feelings very bad at times with dizzy spells and nervous feelings. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I feel like a new person and am in better health and no more troubled with the aches and pains I had before I took your wonderful remedy. I recommend it to my friends for I cannot praise it enough."—MRS. MARGARET GRAMMAN, 759 N. Ringgold St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Beverly, Mass.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for nervousness and dyspepsia, when I was going through the Change of Life. I found it very helpful and I have always spoken of it to other women who suffer as I did and have had them try it. They also have received good results from it."—MRS. GEORGE A. DUNBAR, 17 Roundy St., Beverly, Mass.

Erie, Pa.—"I was in poor health when the Change of Life started with me and I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, or I think I should not have got over it as easy as I did. Even now if I do not feel good I take the Compound and it restores me in a short time. I will praise your remedies to every woman for it may help them as it has me."—MRS. E. KISSLING, 931 East 24th St., Erie, Pa.

No other medicine has been so successful in relieving women's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Such letters are received and answered by women only and held in strict confidence.
